

LLOYD GEORGE STILL SEES THREAT OF WAR IN ALL OF EUROPE

on which so many millions depend, and in order to give a sense of stability and security to Europe."

The Russian leaders, said the premier, quite realized they were not going to get credit from the west upon a basis of confiscation and repudiation of debts. They also knew that Russia never would be restored until she got credit. As regards debts of money advanced to Russia before the revolution, he said, the Russians were prepared to compromise, saying the obligations they accepted would depend upon the assistance received. The position of the European powers was clearly defined in the Cannes resolutions, which Russia accepted, he added.

The Russians, he continued, had to realize that they would not get credit until they commanded the confidence of the only people who were in a position to give it to them. Mr. Lloyd George said The Hague Conference was to be a practical discussion between the experts on the basis of the Cannes resolutions. "I am very hopeful," he said, "that when they come down to examination of practical propositions something will be achieved."

One of the unfortunate results of the war, which had demonstrated the power of international good will, was that it should have developed into narrow, selfish, blind nationalism that was found in every direction—in customs restrictions and in trade and transportation, he declared. Transportation organized to develop international trade was used to prevent international trade. Not merely the amount of tariff was objectionable, he added, but its fluctuations and uncertainties. The human intellect was exhausted in order to make trade as difficult as possible. "This is the condition which we found at Genoa," he asserted.

"In the mean time," Mr. Lloyd George declared, "we have had to consider what could be done in order to prevent a conflict in Europe. If we were to continue the Genoa examinations we had to insure the peace of Europe. That is why we have the truce of peace, which embodies the solemn declaration on the part of thirty-four nations that they will be guilty of no act of aggression against each other."

"I am not going to say that Genoa will ultimately succeed; I believe it has accomplished great things already. If Genoa fails, the position of Europe will indeed be tragic. The British delegation are proud that they took a leading part in upholding and fighting for high ideals, which will always be associated with the grave problems at Genoa."

The Premier said the Genoa gathering was probably the largest in history, comprising nations that were hardly on speaking terms because of feuds and misunderstandings, but the Conference met in calm harmony and discussed not all the questions in dispute, because some had been referred to other tribunals. He said he believed if such a Conference had been held in 1914 the world would have been spared of the tragic experience of the World War.

The attainment of normal conditions in Europe, he said, had been impeded by numerous obstacles, the removal of which was the aim of the conference. The first of these was currency difficulties and the instability of exchanges; the second was customs and trading restrictions; the third transport difficulties, and the fourth was the absence of a sense of security against war. He said commissions were established to deal with each of these problems.

UNION HAS $15,000 TO RUIN HIS BAKERY BUSINESS, HE SAYS

thus am not forced to pay $95 a week wages to the men. The union cannot tolerate this. They want to force me to either give up my business, submit, or to employ more workmen than I need.

"To pay $30 and $30 per week wages."

"To give, free of charge, to every man from $4 to $5 worth of bread every week."

"To pay for ten holidays, on seven of which work is done and for which I must pay double."

"To submit to a five-day week for the steady men and in order to cover all these conditions, I shall be forced to increase the price of bread 2 and 3 cents a pound as the other bakers are forced to do."

"A question. If the union succeeds in strangling me, how long do you think this store next to mine will continue to sell bread at 5 cents a pound?"

"$15,000. They announced that they have raised $15,000, which they will spend to strangle me in order that the price of bread shall be greatly increased, and if this $15,000 is not sufficient, they asserted at their open air meeting that they will raise another $15,000 for this purpose."

"Another question. Why does not the union establish such 5-cent bread stores near those bakers who are forced, through the despotic conditions imposed upon them by the unions, to sell bread 2 and 3 cents dearer than I have been selling it for the past eleven months?"

Schlesinger in telling off the methods of the union said one of the members had pushed his wife out of a store.

CHILD LABOR BAN IS GOMPERS'S AIM

Federation Leader Calls Conference to Meet in Capital in June.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor has called a national conference to find means for abolishing child labor. It was announced to-day. The conference will meet here in June.

"About 100 men and women, leaders in the struggle to abolish child labor, have been called here to plan a united campaign to make impossible the exploitation of America's children in gainful pursuits," Gompers said.
